STUDIA :

FELICIANUS GIL DE LAS HERAS (Promotor Justitiae in Tribunali Rotae matritensis):
De executione sententiae provisoriae.

Ostendere condendit Auctor iudicem "a quo", postquam sententia publicata est, require eius executionem provisoriam decernere. Ut talem conclusionem statuatur, facultates iudicis describit iure veteri vigentes; veterem disciplinam confert cum iure Codicis et concludit Codicem antiquam praxim processualem hac in re mutavisse. Principium "appellatione pendente nihil innovetur" valet a momento quo sententia publicatur et iudex qui eam tulit desinit esse iudex in hac causa. Appellationes in devolutivo iure veteri multae erant, sed Codex statuit principium quod tales appellationes tunc tantum admitti possunt cum norma legalis id expresse dicat. Executio sic dicta provisoriae iure antiquo ignota erat.

STUDIES :

FELICIANO GIL DE LAS HERAS (Fiscal of the Madrid Tribunal): The provisional execution of a sentence.

The author seeks to demonstrate that the judge "ad quo" cannot grant execution of the provisional sentence once this is published. To reach this conclusion he studies what this judge could do under the old laws and compares this with the laws of the Code. He decides that the Code has changed the procedural practice in this respect. The principle "appellatione pendente nihil innovetur" has force from the moment of publication of the sentence and the judge who issued that then ceases to be a judge in this cause. Faced with the great number of appeals which existed in the old law, the Code has established the principle that this appeal "in devolutivo" is only possible when the law establishes it expressly. What is called "provisional execution of sentence" was unknown in the older legislation.
